"And haven't we got one Emma?"

"We have a place in which to live," answered the wife, somewhat evasively.

"And it is our home," pursued George. "And" he added, with a sort of confident flourish, "home is the wife's peculiar province. She has charge of it, and all her work is there; while the duties of the husband call him to other

Why should not this be my home evenings, as well as in the day time and in the night?"

"Well—isn't it?" asked George.
"How can it be if you are not here? What makes a home for children, if it be not the abode of the parents? What home can a husband have where there is no wife? And—what real home comforts can a wife enjoy where there is no hus-band? You do not realize how lonesome I am all alone here during these long evenings. "Yes, I would," said George at a venture. "Will you remain here every evening next week and let me spend them among my female friends?"

"Certainly I will; and I assure you I shall not

With this the husband went out, and was soo among his friends. He was a steady, industrious man, and loved his wife truly; but, like thousands of others, he had contracted a habit of spending his evenings abroad, and thought of no His only practical idea of home seemed to be, that it was a place which his wife took care of, and where he could eat, drink, and sleep, as long as he could pay for it. In short he treated it as a sort of private boarding-house; of which his wife was landlady; and if he paid all the bills he considered his duty done. His wire had frequently asked him to stay at home with her but she had never ventured upon any argument before, and he had no conception of how much she missed him. She always seemed happy when he came home, and he supposed she could always

The wife went out, and the husband was left alone. He had an interesting book, and he gan to read it. He read till eight o'clock, and then he began to yawn, and refer frequently to the dial.

The book did not interest him as usual. Ever and anon he would come to a passage which he knew would please his wife, and instinctively he turned as though he would read it aloud; but there was no wife to hear it. At half-past eight he arose from his chair and began to pace the floor, and whistle. Then he went and got his flute, and performed several of his favorite airs. After this he got a pack of cards, and played a game of "High, Low, Jack," with an imagin:ary partner. Then he walked the floor, and whist led again. Finally the clock struk nine, and his wife

A traveler from Virginia, as his blooded horse plethoric saddle bags, and haughty insouciance indicated, stopped at a comfortable wayside inn in Kentucky, one night, many years ago. The landlord was a jovial, whole souled fellow, as landlord was a jovial, whole souled fellow, as landlords were in those days and gave the stranger the best entertainments his table and bar would afford, as well as his own merry company to make him glad. Early in the morning the stranger was up and looking around, when he espied a rich bed of mint in the garden. He straightway sought Boniface, and indignant at what he supposed his inhospitality in setting plain whisky before him, when the means of brewing nectar were so easy of access, he drag-

"First rate," returned George, bravely. "I think Home is a great place." "Especially when one can have it all to him-elf," added the wife, with a sidelong glance at her husband. But he made no reply.

On the next evening Emma prepared to go out as before; but this time she kissed her husband ere she went, and seemed to hesitate "Where do you think of going?" George asked

"I may drop in to see Uncle John," replied Emma. "However, you won't be uneasy. You'll know I'm safe."

"O-certainly." When the husband was left to his own reflecons, he began to ponder seriously upon the subject thus presented for consideration. He could not read—he could not play—he could not enjoy himself in any way, while THAT CHAIR WAS empty In short, he found that Home had no real comfort without his wife. The one THING needed to

"I declare," he said to himself, "I did not think it would be so lonesome. And can it be that she feels as I do, when she is here all alone? It must be so," he pursued, thoughtfully. "It is just as she says. Before we were married, she the evening, he gave his horse to an old ne who was at the gate, and at the same time was very happy in her childhood's home. It would be a relief to see her face. I won't go in. She shan't know yet that I hold out so faintly.

George Wilson took another turn across the room, glanced once more at the clock, and then took his hat and went out. He locked the door after him, and then bent his steps towards Uncle John's. It was a beautiful, moonlight night, and the air was keen and bracing. He was walking along, with his eyes bent upon the sidewalk, when he heard a light step approaching him. He looked up, and—he could not be mistaken—saw his wife. His first impulse was to avoid her, but she

I The Washington Union devotes nearly column of leading editorial to a review of the speech of the Hon. Humphrey Marshall at the great meeting of working men in Philadelphia. The main point of the Administration's organ is to deny that the President recommended the passage of a Bankrupt law, applicable to railroad corporations as well as to the State Banks, and thereupon to charge Mr. Marshall with injustice to Mr. Buchanan, for the reason that the President had not given the expression of his approbation to the proposition.

The Union is literally correct in its assertion as we discover "by turning over the leaves of the message," but Mr. Marshall was substantially correct also; for in his speech refering to this policy, he said: "But this popular instinct or in "telligence, if you please, which led to such "emphatic repudiation of the policy of Mr. "Buchanan and Mr. Cobb-for the financial " genius of the latter first offered it for accept ance, I believe-should not prevent you from "an examination of the policy proposed by the "Administration in this regard." The policy is here spoken of as originating with Mr. Cobb, the Secretary of the Treasury, but, being presented in the annual report of that officer, it is very properly also treated as a recommendation of the Administration. The recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury is in unmistakeable language, thus:

"The two cases which it is now proposed to bring under the operation of a compulsory bank rupt law are Banks and railroad corporations The immense capital employed by these companies, their controlling power and influence in the commercial and business operations of the country, their disposition to expand and enlarge their credit, and the serious effects produced by operations when carried beyond legitimate bounds, impose upon the government the duty of providing by every constitutional means in our power for the safe, proper and legitimate conduct of such corporations. The facts which are presented in other portions of this report, decorporations, will fully justify the policy now re-

It will be remembered by all who witnessed the proceedings of the Kentucky Legislature last winter that the Democrats of that body not only took the view that this recommendation was from the Administration, but actually endors it as sound in doctrine and were ready to swear by months, viz: ed it as a dogma of the national Democratic faith. To such this characteristic repudiation of Mr. Cobb's formal financial policy by the Administra tion of which he is the most prominent and distinguished member must appear marvellous. It is not strange to us after a perusal of Mr. Mar shall's review of the effect which would flow from the adoption of the measure recommended by the Secretary and formally communicated to Congress. But we imagine that Mr. Cobb will feel more curious than Mr. Marshall to pursue the discourse of the Union and to ascertain the 000, including the loan of $20,000,000 recently meaning of the explicit denial of the principles authorized by Congress. Taking into consideration the present state of the treasury, and the LECTURES .- Mr. A. D. Madeira, of Covington, will, in a few days, deliver in Frankfort a series of lectures, which have met the approval and probable amicable adjustment of the difficulties have been greeted by the applause of his audiences wherever he has been. Mr. Madeira has been highly complimented by the public press, and from our acquaintance with his ability as an elocutionist and as a scholar, we are confident his efforts will give universal satisfaction.

For the Commonwealth. At an early hour on Monday (5th,) according to previous arrangements, the three Sabbath Schools, Christian, Methodist and Baptist, started for Dr. Stealey's beautiful grounds, which had been kindly tendered and accepted, for the purpose of celebrating the great Anniversary commemorate of our national existence; of course there was a goodly attendance.

The exercises were opened and concluded with prayer, the Declaration of Independence was read and an address delivered, when the merry laugh and sportive glee took the place of the more solemn services, which unceasingly con tinued until a late hour in the afternoon, when all retired fully satisfied of having performed their duty to the revered ashes of their forefathers. This communication would fail its purpos were we not to return the united thanks of all to Dr. Stealey, who in that liberal spirit so characteristic of him, threw open his grounds for the reception of all; and also to Messrs. Link, Graham, and Johnson, who, in the same spirit, gratuitously furnished the vehicles for the trans portation of all.

I IT It is vain to stick your finger in the water, and pulling it out, look for a hole; it is equally vain to suppose that, however large a spa occupy, the world will miss you when you die.

Tired of it. South, are getting more and more tired of radicalism.

upon this subject. We quote from the Bee. "The tendency for many years in this country has been to render the Government more and more essentially Democratic. We use the word in its rigorous and primitive sense. Popular suffrage from being restricted, has grown to be universal. Not alone is it an accompaniment of citizenship, but in some States it is bestowed on those who have never abjured their allegiance those who have never abjured their allegiance to the country of their birth. The term of residence as a qualification for suffrage has been gradually abridged. In no State does it exceed one year, in several it is limited to three months. With this extraordinary expansion of suffrage, every restriction in the shape of property qualification or the payment of taxes has been swept away and the conditions now required for the away, and the conditions now required for the exercise of the elective franchise in most of the States is simply a term of residence and citizen ship. As might have been anticipated the application of the elective principle has proce pari passu with the extension of the suffrage.

Every officer, from the highest to the lowest, executive, legislative and judicial—is made dependent on the will of the body politic. "In the eagerness of lawgivers to court the fawor of the masses, by enlarging popular prerogatives, there has been a species of competition amongst the States which should repudiate most speedily and most completely the principle of a representative Republic, and substitute in its stead that of a pure Democracy. While thus sapping, one by one, many of the safeguards of law-regulated freedom, the evil consequences which were certain to follow, have been overlooked in the fond anticipation that the virtue and integrity of the people would prove equal to the new responsiwith which they were invested. Recent events, however, begin to impair the convictions even of the most sanguine advocates of Democ Theoretically, the idea that in an enlight ened and free community the people may be safely made the direct repository of all power, is certainly fascinating and specious. "Practically, however, it does not seem to work well, or to answer general expectations. The abuses and errors which flow from it are less manifest in the rural than in the urban population. The former are usually fixed to the soil, to habits of reverence and obedience to law, less violently agitated by the spirit of partisanship, and suffering less from the alloy of unworthy and turbulent elements. Cities are composed of different materials. In the latter there are thousands of men enjoying the right of suffrage who rarely, if ever, use it with discrimination; who are the infuriate zealots of party; who are bad in the composition of the contraction of the cont citizens, reckless of the restraints of law, and in-different to the perpetration of crime. These are the men who usually control our elections. They hold at least the balance of power, if not more, and very frequently achieve deplorable triumphs over the moderation, the good sense, the sobriety, and the intelligence of the rest of the communi-

Commenting upon all this, the Phila. "Gazette" very justly says:

"There are no positions taken which are not evident to all. The case is simply stated, and the writer draws his conclusions clearly. He falls inthe common error, however, in arguing upon this subject, viz: to propose an abridgement of the suffrage, which in the first case is impracticable, and in the second place would prove but a partial remedy for the evil. That the franchise ought to be more carefully guarded, we think, cannot be denied. The naturalization laws ought to be enforced in their spirit as well as in their letter. The payment of taxes in full every year should be required of every voter, and many other improvements put into practice. But were all this to be done, the main evil would still remain. That is incident to the frequency of our elec-tions, and the multiplicity of offices to be filled. In a great city this renders all elections mere par-tisan struggles. We think experience has proven the impolicy of electing judges of courts, district attorneys, prothonotaries and clerks, and magistrates; yet these are all thrown into the vortex of politics, and we have seen here a grave tribunal whose business it is to administer jus-tice, distracted for many months by the unblushing misdeeds of parties occupying its offices, over whom it had no control, in consequence of their elective tenure. Our terms of office are

It was a sight which sincere Abolitionists might have seen to their great edification. From the N. Y. Express. Several of the leading presses, North and The New Orleans "Seduction" Case-A New and Important Principle Estab-

We published in last Saturday's Express the details of a most remarkable trial, with a still more remarkable verdict, at New Orleans,—the parties to which were the People on the one hand, and a Mr. G. W. Harby on the other,—the latter being charged with murdering one C. H. Stone, a well the procedure of the strength The New Orleans Bee, and the New Orleans Commercial Bulletin, have had articles of value nown merchant and citizen, for the alleged seduction of his daughter, under circumstances which it is not necessary for our purpose to recapitulate here. We now allude to the case, as one establishing a very important and altogether novel principle, namely, that a man must marry woman with whom several persons swear they have had criminal intercourse, or as an alterna-tive, he may be shot down like a dog in the street; the jury deciding that that species of killing is no murder; nay, indeed, that it is rather a meritorious ct than otherwise, and one therefore, for which the actor is deserving a popular ovation. It is no new thing, indeed, that jurymen, sworn to render a verdict solely upon the testimony submitted to their consideration, should permit their judgment to be carried away by their feel-ings. Indeed, so uniformly do they permit their adgment to be carried away by their feelings, in cases where a woman undertakes to revenge herelf upon her betrayer by taking his life, -or in cases where some father or brother of the victim is the self-appointed agent of the "revenge," or the "retribution"—that it is come to be a recognized dogma in the doctrine of equivalents, the all such deviations, if legally wrong, are morally right. Hence no jury would convict Amelia Norman for murder, or manslaughter, or anything of the sort, for stabbing a faithless lover on the steps of the Astor House, in this city, not many years ago; hence Singleton Mercer, in Philadelphia, was "not guilty" of killing an acquain-tance who had dishonored his sister; hence, likewise, Thomas Washington Smith was not responsible there for assaulting the Bank President (Carter) for seducing an unhappy young woman, anterior to her marriage with the murtaken from the criminal record, at home and in our own neighborhood. And the annals of criminal jurisprudence, throughout the whole country furnish many more in addition. If, then, the New Orleans case simply furnished a reaffirma-tion of that now seemingly established principle, that killing a seducer is no murder, -it might be dismissed as one of those periodical commonplaces, not calling for special remark beyond the walls of the Court, at the time of trial, or out of the dull pages of a lawyer's magazine. But what are the facts? In the several cases specified above, the heroine was understood to have led a virtuous life, and to have made but one false step, and that one through the agency of some villainous artifice, facilitated by an unwar-rantable confidence in a sense of honor, which no professional seducer can be supposed to possess. They were not like Miss Harby open to the charge of indiscriminate intercourse with, not one man, nor two, nor three, but many. Hence, though the killing of the seducer was murder-sometimes of the most cool and deliberate character—the feelings of the jury decided that the seducer was bound to marry his victim or be de-prived of his life,—and to these feelings the multitude outside of the jury box and the courts usually responded with approval. The law called it murder, and such punishable with death-out the "higher law" of the heart, and the feelings, and the sentiments, of the jury box carried the day against the law written upon the Statute

Now, what the New Orleans case decides, in contradistinction to these precedents, is this; that a man is bound to marry a "fast" woman—one ho has as many lovers apparently, as she has fingers and toes; who "keeps a night key;" who receives nocturnal visits from notorious ladies' nen in her father's parlor; who goes to ice-cream saloons with questionable company, at question able hours; and who goes to church on Sunday as if only to call the roll of her lovers. A woman of this volatile temperament, in the course of time, naturally enough, is overtaken with the re-sponsibilities of maternity; and (the verdict now s) whoever she may arbitrarily elect from among her lovers to be the father, that person must marry her-or be killed. Gloss it over as we may, this is the marrow of the whole matter-and the moral of it all is, that all men should avoid fast women. There may be nothing positively criminal in conversation with them—there may be nothing but "flirtation,"—but we see here how dreadful is the risk of having anything to do with

AUDITOR'S OFFICE,
FRANKFORT, KY., July 1, 1858.

This is to certify that J. M. MILLS, as Agent of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., of Hartford, Conn., at (Frankfort) Franklin county, has filed in this office the statements and exhibits required by the provisions of an act, entiled, "An act to regulate Agencies of Foreign Insurance Companies," approved March 3, 1856; and it having been shown to the satisfaction of the undersigned that said Company is possessed of an actual capital of at least one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as required by said act, the said J. M. Mills, as Agent as afore, said, is hereby licensed and permitted to take risks and transact business of insurance at his office in Frankfort, for the term of one year from the date hereof. But this license may be revoked if it shall be made to appear to the undersigned that since the filing of the statements above referred to, the available capital of said Company has been reduced below one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

In testimony whereof, I have set my hand, the day and year above written.

GENTLEMEN:—Having made a particular examination of Goodrich's "History of All Nations," I am free to say, that I know of no work, great or small, that contains half the amount of useful and entertaining matter for family reading. It is written in Mr. Goodrich's heat family reading. It is written in Mr. Goodrich's best tyle. It is a library, a historical library of itself; and it is worth, according to the usual cost of good reading, two or three times the money you ask for it. It is no wonder that you have to keep a power press running constantly to supply the orders for these volumes; for the public have only to know their value to make them a universal want with all classes.

I am, gentlemen, most respectfully yours,

PROSPECTUS OF THE

local enterprises, that may be calculated to advance the general weal of the community.

An earnest effort will be made to render it a valuable family newspaper, acceptable to all parties, combining a variety of interesting and instructive subjects in its columns. Having had considerable experience in the business, and being practically familiar with its mechanical duties, we indulge the hope that we shall be enabled to subserve to some extent, the interests to which the "Ferr Priss" will be dedicated.

American Politics at the present time, may be said very justly, to be in a chrysalis state. We do not design, in this Prospectus, to enter the domain of speculation. It is not necessary to the present purpose, or to define our political position. This may be defined very briefly. We are conscientiously opposed to the practices and the precepts of Modern Democracy. We regard the Democratic party, as now constituted, essentially an alien party; and consider its aims and purpose, as avowed by its organs, practiced by its leaders, and developed in the present administration, pregnant with evil to the Union, in violation of the plain injunctions of the early fathers, and disastrous to American Nationality. We recognize in the "Address of the American Party," promulgated at the Louisville Convention, a political creed, eminently national, eminently conservative, and peculiarly adapted to present exigencies. We believe that in the fundamental principles of that organization may be found the panacea for many, if not all the political evils, which have disordered the country and fomented sectional strife, and which it is now in evident contemplation to aggravate by unwise and imprudent legislation.

Whilst we shall aim to be perfectly independent and honest in the expression of our views of public men and measures, we shall studiously observe courtesy and a proper respect for the opinions of others, whose convictions may lead them to differ with us. It is the peed of the state. Our whole system of government reposes upon al opinions.

We invoke, in aid our enterprise, the support and patronage of the citizens of Barren and surrounding counties, and especially those whose opinions may harmonize with the general viewsherein expressed.

We send you this circular, hoping that you may feel inclined to give us the benefit of your influence, in procuring alist of subscribers in your locality, by the 1st day of February, 1858.

The "Free Press" will be published weekly, on new and beautiful type, at the following rates;— Single copy, one year, (invariably in ad-

"CENTRAL KENTUCKIAN."

PUBLISHED IN LEBANON, KY.

Lebanon, since the completion of the Railroad, connecting it with Louisville, is a point of interest to a large section of country. There are hundreds of persons abroad who are in want of information upon various topics connected with it, such as the prices current, facilities for doing and having business done here, &c., and the citizens of Lebanon themselves, wish to inform the public at large, that it is one of the most enterprising and flourishing towns in the interior of the State, and that it offers great inducements as a place of residence to men of almost every honorable trade and profession. To supply these wants, of people abroad and citizens at home, we have determined to publish "The Central Kentuckian"—a paper devoted to the Commercial, Agricultural, Literary, and Moral welfare of the community in which it is circulated.

It is hoped that we shall be able, by attention to the interest of all concerned, to supply a desideratum long felt.

Citizens of Lebanon, and of Marion and surrounding counties, to you, of whatever political party orreligious sect, we look for support—and the more liberal that is, the larger and more entertaining will be our paper—for we are determined, if you will place in our hands the means, to make the Central Kentuckian worthy of our patronage.

To obtain this, however, we shall not sacrifice inde pendence by piedging ourselves to any party or sect, yet we shall promise you Neutrality in Nothing. If we are not capable of choosing our subject matter, and of commenting upon all or any topic of public interest, in a manner which shall be at once courteous and inoffensive, we ought not to come before you as Editers. To be faithful journalists of passing events—candid critics of public acts—and successful advocates of Truth, is the hight of our ambition.
